HE BROKE THE ENGAGEMENT. Rosenthal's Former Sweetheart Mas Him

Simon Rosenthal of 37 Forsyth street was charged in the Essex Market Court yesterday with stealing $200 from his former sweetheart, Fannie Taymond, of 113 Monroe street. According to the girl Rosenthal did not love her, but wanted the $600 which she had saved up. She aid that she had given him $200, and because she did not give him the balance before the wedding took place he broke off the engage-

The wedding was to have taken place last Friday night in Pacific Hail, in East Broadway. Several hundred invitations had been sent out. When the engagement was broken word was sent to some of the guests, but it was impossible to notify them all, and many assembled in the half.

hall.

Rosenthal said that the only money he received from the woman was $25, which she lent him several months ago to go to Pittsburgh, where a situation had been promised him. Rosenthal turned to his sweetheart and said he was willing to marry her. She indignantly spurned his offer, saying. "Y ou are the one who has learned me to hate you."

As there was a cloud of winesses to be heard Magistrate Crane decided to postpone the hearing until to-day. He held Rosenthal in $1,000 ball.

CROWDS IN CENTRAL PARK.

As Hot There as Elsewhere, but Foliage Enough to Afford Shade.

Central Park was crowded yesterday, although no cooler than anywhere else in town. It had one advantage over the rest of the city-the was thrown open to the multitude, and grass was thrown open to the multitude, and people had something better than hot pavements to stroll about on.

While the heat was that of midsummer the foliage is that of early spring, although the leaves of nearly all the trees are grown enough to afford shade.

The merry-go-round, as usual on Sunday, whirled people about to the music of airs no more worldly than "My Country, "Tis of Thee."

"100 Years of American Commerce."

A History of American Commerce by 100 Americans.

EDITED BY CHAUNCEY M. DEPEW.

Teis History is the first great work in the literature of American business. Issued to commemorate the close of the first century of our commercial liberty, it describes and perpetuates the marvellous story of our material development and commercial transformation since American industrial originality found its first embodiment in Whitney's cotton gin. It contents are divided into 100 chapters, written by practical men of affairs, each an expert authority. Indispensable in its value to business and professional men, and to all young men who contemplate a commercial career.

Further large shipments of gold abroad last week, joined to the show of strength made by the silverites, both Democratic and Republican, n several important State Conventions, have had the effect of discouraging speculative purchases of stocks, and, as a consequence, of depressing prices. The depression has not, so far led to any excessive increase of sales, but has merely confirmed the duiness which has prevalled on the Stock Exchange for several weeks cast Operators on both sides are waiting, first, to see how extensive the gold export movement will become, and, next, what will probably be the result of the approaching Presiden tial election. At the best, Presidential years are notoriously bad for business, and this one promises to be unusually so, both from the perilous nature of the issues involved and from the doubt of a favorable decision of them. It is more than likely that the present outflow of gold will continue until our total loss of the metal considerably exceeds that of inst summer The causes producing it are no less powerful now than they were then, while the artificial obstructions then placed in its way by the Morgan-Belmont syndicate are now wanting. It is in our favor, indeed, that the Treasury holds, locked up, $30,000,000 more gold, $40,000,000 more legal tender and Treasury notes, and $15,000,000 more silver dollars and silver certifiates than it held at this time last year, and, to that extent, the currency in the hands of the public has been diminished. The deficiency in the revenue, also, which compels the reissue of the redeemed legal tenders, is considerably smaller this year. Nevertheless, the volume of our currency is still much too great for the needs of the country, and the surplus must flow away in gold, as the only form in which our foreign creditors will accept payment.

The additional charge, equivalent to about one-eighth of a cent on the pound sterling, made by the steamship companies to the freight of rold across the ocean, calls attention very pointedly to the wasteful expense of our present sys tem of adjusting the balances of international lebts. It is like the practice which prevailed in this city years ago of settling accounts between banks by the laborious process of sending sround by each bank to each bank messengers bearing checks and drafts, and bringing home their proceeds in cash. This practice has long been superseded by the use of the simple ma chinery of the Clearing House, just as transactions in grain, flour, cotton, and metals are completed by the exchange of warehouse receipts which serve as representatives of those con-modifies but we continue to transport millions of dollars in gold and gold bullion to and fro across the ocean, when, but for international suspicion and distrust, we might just as well use certificates of deposit in the United States Treasury, the Bank of England, the Bank of France, or any similar institution.

Unfortunately, such an improvement, like the universal disarmament and universal peace adrocated by some benevolent enthusiasts, is at present impossible, and the clumsy system of weighing, packing, carting, shipping, and insur ng of gold back and forth will probably continue to prevail for years to come. In fact, if it could be abolished, the use of gold generally as money could also be abandoned, and the paper obligations of Governments and Government banks could be made to take its place. The actual gold is needed only because of a want of faith in promises to pay gold, and so long as nations are hostile to one another, and war between them is possible any day, this faith must necessarily be wanting. The substitution of credit for cash in mercantile transactions beween citizens of the same country, which is every year becoming more and more general, is croof of what might be done between citizens of different nations, provided only the danger of postilities could be entirely removed.

Just at this moment, too, the monetary exchanges between the United States and the countries of Europe are abnormally hampered by the doubts of our integrity generated by the efforts of the free silver coinage party to degrade the standard of value, and thus to make debts contracted upon the gold basis payable upon a silver basis, which would virtually rob our creditors of one-half their dues. From present indications, the Democratic party is bent upon committing itself, in the approaching Presidential campaign, to the free silver policy, and it is by no means certain, although it is probable, that the Republicans will pro nounce squarely against it. The favorite Presi dential candidate of the Republicans is a man who has no fixed convictions on the subject, and his election, excepting upon a platform hostile to silver, would be far short of a positive victory for gold and a defeat of silver. The contest would be left to be decided by the election of Representatives in Congress, and the best which that body can do, until the complexion of the Senate is changed, will be to keep things in a state of doubt. At all events, the contest will certainly extend through the coming summer, and there is no assurance that its result will positively be de termined in November. That, uitimately, the country will pronounce for the maintenance of the gold standard, respect for the honesty of the mass of our fellow citizens compels us to believe, but as yet the silverites are so noisy and so confident in their assertions of their strength as to cause great anxiety to all whose interests would be imperilled by their success. The situation here in this respect is similar to that in which Great Britain found itself just before the las Parliamentary election. The British bimetal chaire, they excitingly claimed that they had you the fight and that the shop you to the fight and that the shop you the fight and the shop you lists were then as vociferous and as defiant as our silverites are now. They filled the newsmetallists occupying prominent positions in the Cabinet, they exultingly claimed that they had won the fight and that the adoption of bimetallism was assured. Yet the very first time they attempted to commit Parliament to a declaration representing their views they found, to their astonishment, a heavy majority test. The same result is likely to follow in this country. The silverites may possibly secure a President friendly to free silver, and elect a considerable number of Representatives, but, as they have, ever since 1890, invariably been Still, that does not prevent them, at present, from exercising a disquieting influence, and prices of agricultural commodities to their former level, and so deprives the silver standard tariff, though less prominent, is also the cause of serious apprehension. If, under the tariff protectionists as well as free traders might be contented to let it alone, on the ground that any change would do more harm, as a change, than it would do good by promoting special interests. Unfortunately, the necessities of the Government, it is agreed on both sides, demand an increase of customs duties of some kind, and thus the whole tariff becomes a matter of controversy. It is true that the Senate, dominated no tariff legislation to go through until free silver is successful, and several years must elapse before they lose the power now in their hands; but they will lose it eventually, and then

Wall Street is obvious. The busy bees of the profits ahrink. With factories running full time, merchants all actively occupied, railroads earning plenty of money, and labor in demand at high wages, people have a large surplus of advance in price. When, on the contrary, this surplus is small and threatens to become there is small comfort to brokers in winning from one another. What they gain in this way one day they lose the next, and no fresh money

thise with ours in all that regards America securities, and the same causes that diminish the demand for those securities here diminish it there. In addition, foreign operators are much more fearful than ours are of the ultimate triumph of free sliver, and when they see, as they now see, a majority of the Democrats favoring it and a majority of the Republicans apparently afraid to resist it, it is no wonder that they refrain from putting their money at risk among us. If they buy anything, it is to sell it again at the first opportunity they got for selling it at a profit, so that their purchases fail to reduce the floating supply on the market, as it would if they bought to keep.

Disagreeable as this state of things is, we must endure it patiently while it lasts, but none the less should we all do our best to put an end to it as soon as possible. There is little hope that the Democratic party will be forced by public opinion to take a firm stand against silver, but the Republican leaders are more sensitive to criticism. Thus far there have only been heard on the one side the mouthpleces of the comparatively few debtors who hope to profit by the adoption of the silver standard, and, on the other, those of the bankers and financiers. The immense number of workers for wages and salaries, of savings bank depositors and of investors, small and large, have yet to utter their voice, and whenever they do so they will silence all opposition. It is necessary, however, to give them an opportunity to speak, and to procure it for them should be the effort of all good citizens. MATTHEW MARSHALL.
